SYNOPSIS.

Cranner is a railroad man who goes into the sand hills to catch robbers. He finds the robbers and, to hold them, steals their horses. The thieves get up a posse and hunt for a tree to hang Cranner as a horse thief, but there isn't a tree in the hills and he escapes while they're looking. Burying himself in the sand up to his ears and covering his face with a weed, he is safe until Anna, a cowman's daughter, comes along with her dog. She arrests him with her gun in hand -- but his name isn't "Slipper Tongue Cranner" for nothing. Between her house and the sand grave he alternates in playing hide-and-seek with the posse until government men come and put the kibosh on the hasty noose plan.
